SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1864.

Ar length we have a formal attempt to import the politics of Irish parties among the general community of New South Wales, and to form a permanent association in support of the views of one section of the Irish people. We always feel the weight of an interdict when we touch upon any Hibernian question. This ground is sacred to one class of views and one set of writers. All other views and one set of writers. All other speculators are warned off with violent gesticu-lations and a show of formidable missiles. So long as the subject is confined to the natives of that country which it is the fashion to call un-happy, the meddling of strangers is repelled by a respectable proverb. It is now, however, attempted to erect the Irish difficulty into an Australian wall of separation. Mr. John (now Mr. President) ROBERTSON, to the wonder of his friends, and in sweet oblivion of the land of his forefathers, has suddenly become more Irish than the Irish themselves. He has enlivened the tedium of a Parliamentary recess by undertaking to obtain justice for Ireland—the repeal of the Union, and a Legislature like our own. The "fantastic tricks" of some political adventurers to terrestrial spectators are exceedingly amusing, however the angels may weep. Every person knows, from the oldest inhabitant to the latest persecuted patriot who quitted his country to better his condition, that Mr. John Robertsow is not an Irishman; that he has learned the sow is not an Irishman; that he has learned the "lingo," but that his tongue is refractory to the gentle accent; that his apostrophes to the shades of his forefathers and to the sufferings of his fellow-martyrs are all the parts of a drama very badly pronounced. Before he goes into such a line of operations he should take some lessens from persons who know the effective style of performance and the traditional tone of this stage. Is there anybody who doubts that Mr. Rohmarson's sympathy for Ireland is simply a scheme to collect about him a certain number of adherents for his own special purposes; that the organisation to | rescue the Emerald Isle from British dominarescue the Emeraid Isle from British commun-tion is simply a plan to recruit for local war! Where is this thing to end? The Scotch could form an association for justice to Scotland, and the improper position of the lion and unicorn in the arms of the United Kingand unicorn in the arms of the United King-dom might be a fair ground of agitation. But the Scotch are a people not so easily captivated by mere words. Their en-thusiasm is limited to the novels of Scott and the poetry of Burns. They give their warmest applause to every allusion to the history and gloties of their native land, but they are commonly men of shrewd good sense, and would as little think of dissolving the Union between England and Scotland as subjecting their country to France—a plan not unknown to those who ask justice for Ireland. Probably there are few persons in this colony who have not formed views of Irish history which would lead them to censure many who have governed, as well as many who have rebelled. But is Ireland the only country which is Ireland the only country which has suffered from the poverty, ignorance, and turbulence of the people, and from the tyranny, rapacity, and cruelty of rulers? Many of the facts now being brought up against English rule are older than the massacre of St. Bartholomew; but whoever thinks of agriculty charging and the control of agriculty charging and the control of the of seriously charging reigning princes with such crimes, or agitating for political anarchy because in former times despotic power was abused? The difficulty of Ireland is chiefly in the attitude of its inhabitants towards each other. There are two great sections divided by race and religion. On the one side is numerical prependerance, and on the other social. Be-fore the tribunal of impartial justice both are to blame for the miseries which have be allen that country. These wrongs, hewever, so far as sanctioned by the Government of England, were antecedent to the legis-lative union. The whole policy of modern times has been remedial and conciliatory. It is not possible to make the people of Ireland love one another, or feel the common bond of citizenship; but everything has been done by the British Parliament to equalise their status, and, as far as is consistent with the rights of property recognised by all civilised Govern-ments, to remedy their agrarian disorders.

The object, however, which it is professed to seek is the establishment of separate Legislatures like our own. But in modern times the Legislature means the Government. Thus, wherever there means the Government. Thus, wherever there are co-ordinate powers, severally representing millions of people, there will be different views of public policy. This will end finally not in compromise and mutual concession but in collision. It is this which constitutes the real impossibility of a Parliament for Ireland. War it a merely municipal question, doubtless it would be easy to give all that is demanded; but as a territory within a few hours' distance of London, it cannot have a Legislature which could be influenced by a separate policy without wrecking the empire itself. This is felt by every English statesman. It is perceived by most reasonable Irishmen, and the consequence is they have abandoned the idea of a separate Legislature, because obviously its powers musbe so limited as to prove a mockery, or the two parts of the United Kingdom would be in no distant time at daggers drawn. We need not recall the strong declarations of British politicians upon this subject—how they have said that no sacrifice, however great it might be—no war, however long or tierce, could be considered half so mischievous as this separation. We do not inquire whether such views are right and just; but if we turn to America we may find of what energy the sentiment is the parent. It is alleged, and probably truly, that the question of slavery was not the fundamental difference between the North and the South. What sacrifices a people will endure to preserve that unity which makes them a power in the earth may be seen by this long and frightful war. Most assuredly England may have her day of misfortune, and, according to a very frosty maxim, "England's difficulty may be Ireland's concentrative," but most certain. be Ireland's opportunity;" but most certainly no English Parliament would shrink from any thing to preserve that unity without which the greatest Empire in the world would most certainly perish. Whatever freaks we may commit can injure ourselves only. We may threaten, as some do threaten, separation, insurrection, and rebellion; but English politicians can laugh at such braggadocio as at the demonstrations of an apprentice out for a holiday. It is a different thing when the question involves millions of people, and a territory accessible to Europe. To confound the two cases together is mere

But is this separation necessary for any good purpose? The debates in the British Parlie show not only that Irish affairs occupy more than their proportion of public time, but that Irish speakers have an influence and authority in the House conceded in considerarepresentatives of a people who would misun-derstand any check to those who assumed to be the exponents of their cause. It is true that the Irish members are not the majority in the House of Commans, but that majority belongs to neither party whose hostility has so often broken into violence and blood-shed. They are neither Orangemen nor Ribbonmen, but desirous of promoting the culture and peace of the country. The mejority of votes in an Irish Parliament upon any probable system of suffrage would transfer all power to the hands of one section of the people—the most numerous, it is true, but not the most disposed to respect the rights f property or of conscience—of all the people in Fortunately, however hostile the inhabitants Fortunately, however hostile the inhabitants of Ireland may be towards each other, they can only effect their purposes through the British Legislature, and this always interposes between the egotism and violence of the parties who contend for supremacy. Such being the case, there is little to commend this agitation to eursympathies. It is difficult to see in what way a colonial association will affect the course of affair in Ireland unless it is proposed that of affairs in Ireland unless it is proposed that we should join the Finian Brothers and send muskets which we had much better reserve for our own protection. The raising of such questions among us only tends to awaken differences which would not otherwise exist, and to multiply the causes of social alienation. It is of no consequence what people think of the question of repeal so long as they do not organise for the ostentation of their opinion; but it is of high importance that the whole of a colonial community should concentrate its efforts and its sympathies in the promotion of the general welfare, which must depend upon the power of the United Kingdom to cope with its enemies and to preserve order in the world.

This is the age of great empires, and the day of small independent States is coming to an end. While warmly sympathising with Ireland in all that is unfortunate inther position, and while attesting the injustice of past government, and hoping for all those ameliora-tions which the improved a virt of the age will infallibly secure, we regard an attempt to drag this colony into Irish politics as an electioneering scheme working its way by inflaming a pernicious delusion

A LITTLE logical inconsistency does not much trouble our protectionist advocates. There seems to be some kindly provision of nature which prevents distress on that acore. Some-times they tell us that protection will make wages good and bring about jolly times for the working classes, and so promote immigration, as Mr. MACLEAY told his audience at Wagga as in: MACLEAY told his audience at wagga Wagga; and at other times they tell us that the effect of protection is always to bring about an ultimate reduction in the price of the protected articles, and to cause the home-made goods to be old cheaper than the imported goods used to be. Unfortunately we are unable to accept both these consolations, because they are some both these consolations, because they are some-what contradictory. They cannot both be true at the same time. If labour is to be made dear and kept dear, commodities cannot be cheap; and if articles are to be sold cheap, it is impossible that labour can be dear. Labour enters as the principal ingredient into the cost of all articles that are produced in the colonies. The cost of the raw material forms only a small part of the cost of the finished article. If the labour bestowed upon the article is highly-paid, the selling price upon the article is highly-paid, the selling price cannot possibly be a low one, and the consumer must be taxed to pay for the rise in wages.

But we are told sometimes that, though this might be the first and immediate effect of protection, the ultimate effect of the establishment of local manufactures would be to lower prices down to, and even below, the standard of im-ported prices—that home made goods would take precedence on account of their superior quality, that they would command the market, and that the extent of business thus secured would admit of a reduced price being ac-cepted by the local manufacturer. In fact, protection is said to be only a temporary neces ity, just to help infant manufactures over the sily, just to help infant manufactures over the troubles of their early career. Once let them get a footing—let them have the monopoly of the local market only for a time, and they would be able then to hold their own without any artificial assistance. That this is not correct has been proved by the experience of every country where, protection having been in the ascendancy, an effort has been made to liberate trade. The most transcriptions trade. The most tremendous efforts are made by the interested trades to retain the high duties, and the most dismal prophecies of ruin are uttered if the protection is withdrawn. No time seems long enough to enable a coddled industry to bear the bracing effects of free The same fact has also been competition. competition. The same law tax and local pro-fronkly confessed by some of our local pro-tectionists, who admit that, if they could only get high duties imposed under the pressure of any financial urgency, vested interests would arise that would successfully resist their

But supposing it were true that the ultimate ffect of protection were to make local articles as cheap as imported ones, this, which is conso-lation for the consumer, would be none for the labourer, who is tempted to clamour for protection in order to raise wages. If the tax upon the former is to be only short-lived, then the for wages which were raised in consequence of the rise in the selling price of articles would fell as that selling price fell. If the consumer is to pay a high price that the labourer may get high wages, there is a transfer from the well-being of the former to that of the latter. The ss of one is the gain of the other. But if the less were to disappear, the gain also would dis-appear; for when the cause ceases the effect

The only way in which products can be cheapened while wages remain good is by the increased use of machinery. Machinery has the same effect as multiplying labourers, and that t a considerably less cost than would be involved in an actual multiplication of an equiva-lent number of human labourers. There is a saving, therefore, effected by the employment of the cheap labour of machinery which can be devoted either to increasing the profits of the manufacturer or to increasing the wages of the human labourers, or to reducing the price to the consumer. As a matter of fact, the distribution has taken place among all three classes, though not always equally or contemporaneously. The general effect of machinery has been to bring about the three results of enriching manufacturers, improving the status and the pay of the labourers, and cheapening commodities But that local protection would enable us so to develop mechanical resources as to more than counterbalance the competition of the old world is obviously out of the question. For the improvement of machinery is itself an art in which we are necessarily distanced. Machinery is employed to the greatest advantage where it is employed on the largest scale, and that would evidently be among the old-established seats of industry, where goods are manufactured not for a restricted local market, but for the market of the world. It is there too, where machinery would most rapidly receive improvement. In fact, one of the first results of local protection would be the importation of manufacturing machinery from the very country with which we have to compete. It is idle, therefore, to hope to neutralise that competition, and to counteract our disadvantage in respect of the high price of labour, by a superiority in the employment of machinery.

It is an accust delivered.

It is an equal delusion to suppose that pro-tection could make the country attractive to new comers by offering a high rate of wages, and so offer a self-acting and inexpensive immigration agency. For supposing the colonial rate of wages as established by protection to be an adequate inducement for artisans to pay their passage out, it could only affect those who could find employment in the protected rades. To all others the inducement would be the other way, for there could be no special attraction to go where the cost of living was made artificially high. What was gained, therefore, in one class would be lost in another, and the attraction would be counterbalanced by a repulsion. Moreover, there would also be an inducement to some already residing in the country to leave. Some mercantile operations would be closed, and those trained to them would have to find another sphere for their talents. Persons, too, retiring on a competency, if their property were in a movable shape, would be more tempted to go and reside somewhere where the cost of living was not artificially enhanced, and where a moderate inartificially enhanced, and where a moderate income would go further. And it should be remembered, too, that if artisans should be enticed out to the pretected trades in any number, their competition would reduce the price of labour and destroy the attraction directly, so that the emigration agency in that shape would cease. The additional labour could not be absorbed without reducing wages, unless manufacturing operations expanded proportionably and that could not be the case unless markets expanded. The merely local market would soon be supplied, and to command distant markets it would be necessary to establish a markets it would be necessary to establish a harkets it would be necessary to establish the superiority either in price or quality over the manufactures of the old world.

manufactures of the cld world.

But the whole supposition rests on a false basis. It is a delusion to suppose that protection would stimulate immigration to any extent. A gold mania will do it; but apart from that nothing will do it, except paying the immigrant's passage, either in land or in money. We have had experience enough on that point to settle the question decisively. Nothing could possibly be more positive than the predictions made while the Land Act was under discussion, that cheap land would bring us out hosts of a migrants, and that thus what we lost in land revenue we should save on the immigration vote. Many who argued thus fully believed it. To give the scheme every chance we spent five rote. Many who argued thus fully believed it. To give the scheme every chance we spent five thousands of money belonging to the next generation, in sending home lecturers to proclaim the good news. Everything that lecturing and the circulation of chesp pamphlets could do was done to open the eyes of the working classes to the privileges offered to them. But it was all to vain. in vain. As a self-acting emigration agency the Land Act has been a dead failure. That delusion having been exploded, we are now told to fall back upon the idea that if cheap land will not bring people out dear labour will, and that labour is to be made dear by protection. The public credulity seems to demand a succes-

The unfortunate little sufferer was instantly taken out of the tub, and remedies were applied to the scalded parts of his body; these, however, wass unavailing, for he died yesterday morning. An inquest was held before the City Grouner vasterday. Dr. Renwick deposed that the cause of doath was exhaustion with great shock to the nervous system from a very extensive sould to the back parts of the body. The jury's verdiet was to the same effect.

Portupa a capacity less by one-thrd would serve to the south of said ranges. All such embanhments should be substantially fenced to keep stock from waring them down. They will also in many cases require protection from the action of the water. It is much cheaper even to lift water from a swamp to fill a reservoir than to obtain it from wells. A horse is eiten made to hift 100,000 gallone per day in such cases. It takes about 3000 cubic yards of earth to make such a reservoir as has been mentioned, which at is, per yard would cost £150. THE CHINESE AT BURRANGONG.

(Abridged from the Young Tribune, August 27.)

ON Saturday, the European miners issued a placerd alling a meeting for the following day. The menting took place accordingly in front of the Sydney Hotel, at three p.m. is consider what steps should be taken to keep the Chinese from digging beyond their proclaimed brundary. Abril 300 persons were present. Mr. Small, a miner, was called to the chair. Hesolutions in furtherance of the objects of the meeting having been agreed to, amemorial was adopted to the effect that the Government was earneally addicted to take some inmediate steps to prevent Chinese from mining at Burrangong, so that the diggers might not, through some evrbal inconcaron in Gold fails Act or proclamation, be driven to desperation by seeing the utter ruin of themselves and families through bordes of Chinese awarming over the Burrangong diggings.

BOLL-UF AND FIGHT AT SPRING GREEK.—On Monday movering, about nine o'clock, a serious affray took place between the Chinese and European miners, who were at that time working on Spring Creek. From the informating where at work cutting a race somewhere shout helf-a-mile from Dickenson's store, and that some Chinamen came with the intention, it was thought, either of interiring with the morigation possession of some wash-dirt to which they had not right. The Europeans drove them away towards the Chinese stores, and some other Europeans (it would appear, two or three patities) also commenced to move several Chinamen towards the attents and the part of the country mon, armed with picks, showles, and sticks of their country mon, armed with picks, showles, and sticks, calling on the diggers to come on and light it out. Mr. C. STAMONS seconded the resolution, and hoped that this dispute about the sewers would be brought to a speedy conclusion. It was desirable that the sewers should be valued at their proper value, and that the citizens should know what they had to pay for.

Mr. Burns deired, before the resolution was put, to speak about a sewer, of which probably the majority of the citizens knew nothing, but for which they were called on to pay. In Woolloomooloo, in Cook Ward, there was a sewer built by private individuals on land that was almost worthlees previous to the appointment of the City Commissioners; some builders who had men at their command obtained bricks, by some maneavre, and built a sewer, about two hundred feet in length, through their own ground. After that dirty jub had been finished some twonty houses were cretced opposite the sewer; and we were called upon to pay at the rate of thirty shillings a house for the sewerage rate. The houses he referred to were situated at the corner of Stanley-street and Riley-street. He was informed that several people who had revised in Mr. Hill's buildings had been obliged in summer to leave in consequence of the filth that was thrown out of that drain. The Government ought certainly to pay the debts they had contracted; but it was the duty of the corporation before they accepted effice to see that those debts were adjusted. They were, however, too esger to accept effice under any circumstances. The reason that the citizens were now called upon to pay the sewerage rates was that enormous salaries were paid to the officers of the corporation was more to be considered in this matter than that of the Legislature. In his opinion, it was the Corporation was more to be considered in this matter than that of the Legislature in the pay the sewerage rate for woollownood and the pay of the citizens, they would not support a sewerage rate for woollow

SPICIAL CASE—HORSE STRALING.

This was a special case from the Tamworth Quarter Sessions, the question being whether or not the jury had been properly directed by Judge Francis, who presided.

Mr. Darley appeared for the prisoner, and Mr. Bernan for the Crow.

The prisoner had been convicted of horse stealing, He was a settler residing near Tamworth, and was found with the horse in his possession among a mob of other horses belonging to himself, which he was driving towards Queensland. The prisoner 's counsel (at the trial) contended that before the jury could find the prisoner guilty they must be satisfied of his having formed the intention of appropriating the horse to his own use directly he saw it among his own. He saked the Judge to direct the jury to this effect. His Honor decilined to do so. He told them, however, that they ought so to convict the prisoner unless they found that before or at the time he first sid any act whereby he treated the horse so moe of his own, he had formed the design of appropriating it. The prisoner was convicted.

Mr. Darley contanded that the view urged by prisoner's counsel at the trial was the correct one, and that the direction of the learned Judge below was surreasous. His other continued the horse so one of his own, he had formed the design of appropriating it. The prisoner was convicted.

Mr. Darley contanded that the view urged by prisoner's counsel at the trial was the correct one, and that the direction of the learned Judge below was surreasous. His other countries of the learned Judge below was surreasous. His other countries of the learned Judge below was substantially right.

INTEREST ON MERCHANTS' ACCOUNTS.

His Honor delivered the following judgment upon a proof tendered by Mesers. Heard, in the matter of the Tomago Mining Company:

The question for my decision is whether the Mesers. Heard (for whom Mr. Juhrann appeared) are entitled to charge interest upon the principal mother mentioned in Mr. Fanning's afficient to proof—being a balance admittedly due to them by the Tomago Mining Company, on foot of an accenut relating to the shipmont of coal from Sychey to China, and its sale in China.

The liability to pay interest on such a balance may be the result, either, of an express or implied contract to that rhed. Where the contract extracted for is an implied one merely, there often is a difficulty.

An implied contract to pay interest on a merchant's account may be made out, either by the acts of the parties and by inference of law, or by general usage and inference of save, or by general usage and inference of law, or by general usage and inference of save, or by account on taining a charge for the particular interest cought to be recovered—or by fine settlement or adoption of an account containing a charge for the particular interest cought to be recovered—or by fine settlement or adoption of an account containing a charge for the particular interest cought to be recovered—or by fine being shown that there is a prevailing custom amongst merchants, according to whichinterest would be payable on transactions similar to the cree under inquiry—for then the law steps in and says that the parties must be taken to have born that usage in usind at the time of their contracting, though not a word may have been said between them on the subject of interest.

In the case before me there has been no previous payment of interest on the company of an account furnished to the directors, in which interest was charged by them (the Heards); 2ndly, that a mange has been established in proof which, even without that stoption, entitle them t

The evidence bearing on those issues has been given so receitly, and lies in such a limited compase, that I do not propose to do more than refer to it generally. I content my reil with stating, that I am of opision, the letter written by the company's secretary, on the receipt by the directors upon the 19th December, 1803, of the account furnished to them by the Messer. Heard (and made up to the 22nd October, 1803), in which the company is debtled with interest as well as principal moneys, would not, of itself, be a will as principal moneys, would not, of itself, be a will as principal moneys, would not, of itself, be a did that claim either for principal or interest—were there any dispute as to the former. But I am further of opinion, that that account and letter, compied with the subsequent leuting of a balance sheet by the company to their shareholders (seeme of whom are also creditors of the company), in which believes best the entire sum claimed by that socount, principal and interest, is returned as a "liability" by the company is part of that claim to give rise to an implied contract, in the first instance, to pay interest on any balance that might become due from them—the mores o, as that balance sheet was duly audited and cartified to be contract by two respectable auditors, pur districts that the summary of the company is a least, to establish, in the language of that section, that "the sifiers and transactions of the company has been brought to a just and true balance, by the Board of Directors, up to the 31st of December, 1863," and that the balance sheet, itself "signed by the chalirman of the company, can the auditors, at the time of the auditing, that, saited in evidence, that it was understood between him and the audition, and the summary of the company has, no doubt, saited in evidence, that it was understood between him and the audition, and with the captes provisions of the Deed of Sattlement under which the particular audition was not competent either to the secretary of the audition, and it

Extract from Mesers. Bergin, M'Encroe, and Co.'s

"Tobacco Circular" for August, 1856: "Since we procured recently large additional press power, and other expensive machinery, there has been a marked improvement in our manufacture. We make from the BEST FURE AMERICAN VINGINIA LEAF, without adulteration of any kind whatcover. We use no deleterious drugs to give an artificial small, but our process of manufacture preserves and improves the genuine, sweet, natural flavour, so peculiarly plessing to smokers. Out tobacco is now in first-rate condition, —fully seasoned, and admitted by competent judges to be in material, favour, size of fig, and style of finish, equal to genuine 'Barratt's Anohor Brand,' and upwards of 25 per cent. greater value than the 'Northern' make from 'Western' leaf now in this market, with 'Barratt's' and other FORORD Southern brands.
From our command of capital, constant direct importations, and facility in manufacturing we are sanabed, at all times, to guarantee an article thoroughly seasoned, and, therefore, in as good condition as the prime brands formerly imported from the Southern markets, but no longer obtainable in this market.

A sample package will be at the Rooms on morning

The Magnificent Hetate of NOR WOOD, the property of J. F. M'Arthur, Req., situated within three miles of GOULBURN.

D DIGNAM and CO. have received ine structions to sell by public auction, at their Booms, Auburn-street, Goulburn, on THURSDAY, 15th Beptember, at 12 o'clock,
That splendid agricultural and grasing estate, known as NORWOOD, the property of J. F. M'Ashar, Esq., situated within three miles of the ofty of GOULBURN; and unquestionably one of the most valuable estates in the southern districts. It contains 2569 cores of excellent land, of which about one-half is fanced off in oultivation and grass paddocks.
The HOMESTEAD is in every respect most complete, and comprises the following valuable improvements:

and comprise the following valuable improvements:

The MANSION is a handsome and massive brick structure, with a superb verandsh 72 feet long and 16 feet wide, tited, axtending along the whole front of the building. The view hence is one of the most pletureque in the neighbourhood of Goulburn, and is relieved by the creek running at the foot of the laws, which alone gestily from the front of the high, and include dining and drawing rooms, each 16 x 20; library, braskfast parlour, and two pantries. The entrence hall is very spacious and divided midway by folding doors; a handsome staticase leads hence to the first-floor, where, from a large well-lighted landing, eight bedroome, four very large, and four amalier, open.

The OUT-OFFIOES include kitchen, store, isundry, servants' rooms, &c.

A SPLENDID HANGE of PARM BUILDINGS, enbetantially built of brick, comprises a BARN, for x 20, with waits 20 feet high; two pair of large folding gates enabling loaded team to drive through it; commedicus 4-8 IALE STABLE, HARNESS ROOM. TWO LOOSE BOXES, large COACH-HOUSE, and GRANARY, about 40 x 13.

Thought and the server of the server of the feet of the farm horses; several men's huis; two large STOCK-YARDS and milking yard; GARDEN of an acre and a quarier, leasted with choice fruit trees, with an accollent well of water upon it.

water is at all times abundant, and the county may be challenged to show a block of similar area possessing so preponderating a share of first-class land.

The Auctiencers are fully aware that it is impossible within the limits of an advertisement to do justice to such a noble property as Norwood, and they must rely upon the result of a personal observation from intending buyers for a just estimate being arrived at, rather than upon their description giving an adequate idea of its edvastages. They, therefore, content themselves with giving a brief matter of fact description of the property. They might expatiate at length upon the evident value of so extensive an extate upon the VERY VRRGE of an IMPORTANT AND RISING CITY; they might draw parallels from elsewhere of the almost incredible changes that have taken place in the value of preparities when RAILWAY COM SUNICATION has brought them as it were into the relations of SUBURBS to the metropolis; and they might go on to show that, whereas the coming of the railway has in the instances of some other towns brought them only an ephemeral property; in the case of Goulsurn, the centre of a west agricultural district, and the point from which before very long many important lines must evidently radiate, the result will be far different. But all these are points upon which the intelligent capitalist will form his own opinion. That NORWOOD, whether judged from the intrinsic merries of the Ratate from the extent and value of the improvements, or from its local advantages, stands SHOOND TO NO PROPERTY IN THE COUNTY must be patent to all; and in bringing it forward at the present time the Auctioneers feed that the bare smoonnooment that it is IN THE MARKET will suffice to attract that attention that the importance of the property merits.

The propristor, Mr. M'Arthur, will give every facility to parties wheing to view the Estate, and an inspection is respectfully solicited.

A Plan will be very liberal, as a large proportion of the purchase money will be allowed to remain

Australasian Steam Navigation shares are offered at par, but no sales have yet been made at that price. Clarence and Richmond River Steam Navigation shares are also offered at lower rates. We have to record another dull week in business generally, and, with the exception of some large sales of flour, rice, sugars, and teas, there is little, if any, alteration to notice in prices.

From —The market is decidedly firmer, and in the absence of arrivals from California and Valparaiso, prices are likely to rule higher. Adelaide is quoted at £23 per tru, and we have heard of small sales at a higher figure. The advance in South Australia has given increased firmness to our market, and holders are a sain anticipating an improvement in prices Wicet. Adelaide is quoted at 9s. 6d. to 10s. per bushel.

CAMPLES are still very dull of sale. Belmo the and Mevas, 10d. to 10jd. per lb.

Rich is firmer, and has advanced in price—the ties that has taken place in Melbourne having had a corresponding effect here. Patna is now quoted at 422 er to n. Java, £22 to £24 per ton. Satris bitmer. Liverpool is worth £3 10s. per t n. F nr. £4 5s. to £4 10s. per ton.

Tonacco.—Several parcels of tobacco have passed the sate interest during the week, but Melbourne telegrams, and unding a large clearance of stock, have had the effect of stopping the current here for the present. No information of the result of the sale, or whether there was any sale at all, has come to hand. A large poportion of the tobacco advertised was evidently of a most unvaleable character.

There was little or no fire in the fire-place at the time; and it is supposed that the bay had struck a match and by some means ignifed the bed clothes and some wearing appered hanging on the wall, as a matchbox was found upon the table. The figning in the house were discovered by several neighbours, who immediately came, and three-ting water apon them put them out, the body of the bay being found in the room quite dead, burnt all over, and the clothes concurred.
